Obituary Notices.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins McCoy, wife of Dr. E. B. McCoy, died at her home in Berea after a two weeks illness from urinaemia, at 5:40 a. m., Saturday, April 20, 1901, aged 31 years. The funeral services were conducted at her home on Saturday morning, by Rev. M. K. Pasco assisted by Rev. Geo. Ames. The remains were taken to Kingston, Ind., for burial.
Miss Hopkins was married to Dr. McCoy, Sept. 19, 1889, at Kingston, Ind., and resided there until May 16, 1899, when she joined her husband at Berea where he had preceded her a month earlier. Mrs. McCoy united with the Presbyterian church in her fourteenth year and was a member of that church in good standing, until her death. She was a conscientious Christian, a good neighbor, beloved of her friends and an affectionate, true mother to her two boys, aged respectively 7 and 9 years, who are left with their father to mourn her death. True sympathy goes out from all our citizens to the bereaved ones.
Mrs. Nancy Hudson, the widowed sister of Green Gabbard, died Friday night.
Indiana miners who came to Kentucky to influence the miners in this state to a general strike were ordered away because they came armed.

"Save Your Bacon."

It may be a surprise to some to know that about half the time since the present "hog law" has been on the books, according to information from two Marshals, there has been no stray pen that will hold the hogs impounded. That some that have been impounded escaped to adjoining premises and thence to the streets. That the police judge, did from proper authority, provide material and order necessary repairs. That he has repeatedly at various times ordered the impounding of hogs, and received in reply that the stray pen would not hold hogs and that he has been informed that the law did not require that they should be impounded only at certain seasons. While it is true that the pen would not hold hogs until it was repaired, it is not true that the law says they cannot be impounded only at certain seasons, they may be and should be while the law remains any day in the year when found running at large. That he has done in his judgement every legal duty required of him, in the enforcement of all laws that have been violated in the town. That good law abiding citizens do not like to file complaints against neighbors when they know that they are violating the law, and are willing to suffer serious inconvenience and sometimes real injury rather than make any disturbance. That the Kentucky Statutes provide (Section 3886) that the town marshal shall prosecute before the police court all branches of town ordinances. That the present "hog law" provides that the Marshal shall impound all animals prohibited from running at large. It may surprise some that the Marshal of Berea has to make a living independent of emoluments accruing from the office of marshal, and therefore cannot at all times patrol the streets to look after stray animals. Finally, that if negligence has prevailed in the enforcement of any law it would be in order to move against any officer suspected of such gross neglect of duty as to deprive the citizen and the public of that protection for which laws are made.
Hogs are a nuisance to many people. They are mischievous at all times and under all circumstances when not properly restrained.
Where laws exist that prohibit them from running at large it should not be necessary for the many to be always on the defensive against depredations committed by the hogs of the careless few who suffer them to run at large in defiance of law.
It is and has been at all times the purpose of the present incumbent of the office of Police Judge to issue processses to bring offenders into court, impartially hear the testimony and so decide fearlessly as may be of what people may say in any given instance.
The purpose of this article is to make known to the citizens of Berea some things which seem to be unknown or imperfectly understood, and to invoke the aid of all citizens in favor of good government, to intelligently co-operate with the officials to effect such results as shall bring it about.

Respectfully Submitted,
POLICE JUDGE.

Action of the Presbytery of Brooklyn in Regard to Mormonism.

The Mormon Church is a vast political machine. It has all along had a dream of "universal dominion," and it teaches its devotees that all civil government is illegitimate, except as officered and controlled by the Mormon priesthood. (See Pratt's "Kingdom of God," Pratt's "Key to Theology," Chapter VIII; "Journal of Discourses," Vol. 1, page 224 and on; same series, Vol. 11, page 189; same series, Vol. V, page 186 and on; "New Witness for God," published 1895, page 187 and on.) It teaches that those who render absolute and unquestioning obedience to the Mormon priesthood are the people of God, and that all others are His enemies who merit His own righteous judgments.

This so-called church makes use of its plausible religious formalities in order to hold its absolute sway; and to do this successfully, it must teach such doctrines as will appeal most strongly to the natural man, and to his baser nature at that.

In addition to the doctrines mentioned in the quotation from the Presbytery of Utah, the Mormon Church teaches that sin is necessary to human progress, "one of the great steps toward exaltation" (Catechism, Chap. VIII), thus furnishing a plausible excuse for its own crimes and for the personal sins of its followers. It teaches that men may become gods by practicing adultery under the euphonious title of "plural or celestial marriage." ("Doctrine and Covenants," Section 132: 19, 20. It teaches that "all spirit is matter" ("Doctrine and Covenants," Sec. 131, V, 7), and denies the existence of the spiritual as distinguished from the material, and teaches that "to affirm that anything is not material is to affirm that it does not exist" (Pratt's "Key to Theology," Chapter V), thus encouraging men to live in sin and sensuality here in order to gain a sensual heaven hereafter. ("New Witness for God," pp. 460-466.)

Mormonism is both anti-Christian, and anti-American. It is a school of immorality and treason (Pratt's "Kingdom of God" and "Key to Theology," pp. 68, 69, and 73.) It is in its very essence the cruelest materialism and the grossest sensuality, immorality and blasphemy masquerading in the garb of religion.

Mormonism is a huge religio-political monstrosity, which is doing its utmost to destroy the Christian home, to undermine the foundations of this Christian republic, and even to make shipwreck of the souls of men in order to satisfy its unholy ambitions and to accomplish its unrighteous purposes.

From these well-established and well-known facts, an intelligent public can surely judge whether such an institution with its 2,000 missionaries, ramifying our entire land, is a menace to our republic or not; and in the light of such well-known and well-established facts it is a great mystery to this Presbytery, which it would be exceedingly interesting to have solved how any newspaper desiring the approval of a law-abiding and self-respecting community, can endorse Mormonism, or the Mormon missionaries as worthy of the confidence of a decent and respectable people.

Done in Presbytery this 3rd day of October, 1898.

THE HOME.

Edited by Miss GRACE J. STOKES, Instructor in Domestic Science, Berea College.

The Table.

Certain it is that there is no influence stronger than that of the table. The inner life of the family is doubtless more deeply affected by the atmosphere which surrounds the table, than by any other single cause. It is not sufficient that there should be at each meal served to the family a sufficient amount of food, that it should be wholesome, that it should be well cooked and attractively served. All of these are important in and of themselves, but there is a depth of thought, feeling, influence, life, to which they do not penetrate.

It has been said that no one should feel at liberty to say at the table one word that is not kind and thoughtful, any more than to withhold a sufficient quantity of food. But we may go much further in the same direction, and say that from the table at all times—whether in the presence of guests, or simply when the members of the family meet for the daily meals—there should be banished all disturbing, care creating, unpleasant topics, of whatever kind or nature. If there is a family or business care which is weighing upon the mind of any person present, let it be most scrupulously avoided, not only in direct allusion, but in the treatment of any topics which may lead to it. Let the table be indeed a refreshing of the whole system—of the body and of the mind—and even if it should be necessary to go directly from its sunshine into the gloom of some great difficulty, there will be the greater strength and courage with which to face the contest.

With this thought and suggestion regarding the social atmosphere which surrounds the table, comes inevitably the consideration that the appointment of the family board should be in keeping with the spirit which makes of it the vital center of the family life. It is true that with the spread of wealth and refinement greater attention is being given to these matters; but this attention is quite apt to run into oddity and extravagance, rather than into the charm of attractive neatness which proves the best adornment for the home of moderate means.

To be sure, there is no good reason why a person of unlimited means should not indulge any reasonable fancy of this sort, and the privilege is being assumed with each new season more and more freely. A writer in one of the daily papers recently made the statement that "with each year the demand for unique table decorations seems to be on the increase. Every hostess is desirous of finding some novelty, of one kind or another. There never was a time when the decorator had so free a hand as at present. So long as they are handsome and unusual, any and all styles of decorating are permissible."

This declaration naturally refers more particularly to those occasions when the service of the professional decorator and caterer is employed; that which will be of the widest interest to the average reader of Good Housekeeping must relate to the table of the home, with which in its home service the housewife has constant care and oversight. How shall she make that table always attractive, within the scope of the family is the important question in answer to which she will be glad to welcome practical suggestions.—Good Housekeeping.

THE WESTERN POULTRY NEWS and THE CITIZEN

One Year for Only 60c.

THE SCHOOL.

Edited by J. W. Dismore, Dean of the Normal Department, Berea College.

On Time.

The gray of dawn was fading fast.
When through the college campus passed
A lad, whose face high purpose showed,
Whose ruddy cheek with anger glowed—
On time, on time!

The sexton grasped the iron tongue,
And to and fro it gently swung.
Then o'er the land both far and near
The silver notes rang pure and clear—
On time, on time!

Within the hall the music swells,
And out, far out, among the bells,
The purple haze of dawn is fled,
Again the merry chiming renews—
On time, on time!

Then birds and bees take up the song,
And hear the joyful notes along.
While father Light awakes the day
And holds his head as if to say—
On time, on time!

The clock upon the steeple high
Is never known to stop and sigh.
But ever wears upon its face,
A motto for the human race—
On time, on time!

Now lifts proud Time his ancient brow,
And soon is past, we know not how.
For present station stands agliss,
And hears his thunder-rumble pass—
On time, on time!

The old earth sings around us,
As on through space he whirls his way,
He brings to light in eastern skies
The glory of a bright sunrise—
On time, on time!

So on through life the question still,
Is not who can, but can and will.
True purpose never has failed to win,
When we with pluck and plod begin—
On time, on time!

—NORMAN MAY.

Miss Daffy-down-dilly.

Miss Daffy-down-dilly this morn' came to town,
Poking her wee bright head out of the ground.
She opened her eyes without ever a sound.
Pretty Miss Daffy-down-dilly.

The warm rain coaxed her soft and slow,
The blue bird called her sweet and low.
She came right after the lingering snow,
Pretty Miss Daffy-down-dilly.

Miss Daffy-down-dilly dear, how do you do?
We're very glad, dainty one, to greet you.
We're broken hearted to say "Adieu!"
Pretty Miss Daffy-down-dilly—Selected.

The Setting Sun.

Dear John, the sun is setting now
Behold him in the west.
And all the children now must soon
Lie down and go to rest.
In other countries far away,
The day begins to break.
And many a child, and many a bird
Will soon be wide awake.
But when the sun comes round again,
And rises in our east
Then evening will begin with them
And they too feel will waste
How very good in God it is,
To make the sun to go
All round this great wide world of ours
To light each country so—Selected.

Remember what a good price is paid for homespun linen at Berea College, and when you put in your crops, plant some flax.

Repair That Loom!

Homespun is coming into fashion again, and our girls should keep up the art of spinning. Berea College is finding a market for the products of fireside industry which may bring education and comfort to many homes.

We can pay for well-woven linen 40 cents a yard, jeans 60 cents, linsey 50 cents, well-matched bed coverlets $4 to $6. Patent dyes not accepted—old-fashioned indigo preferred.

For information address, JOSEPHINE A. ROBINSON, Homespun Exchange, Berea, Ky.
